GONZAGA COLLEGE,

WASHINGTON CITY, D. C.

This College was incorporated on the 1st of May, 1858, by Congress, under the name of "THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTORS OF GONZAGA COLLEGE." The same bill that gives it a legal existence, charters it "to have and enjoy the power and faculty of conferring and confirming upon such pupils in the institution, or others, whom, by their proficiency in learning or other meritorious distinctions, they shall think entitled to them, such degrees in the liberal arts and sciences as are usually granted in colleges."

The course of studies is substantially the form of teaching ("Ratio studiorum") followed for more than three hundred years in the Jesuit Colleges in Europe, and since 1790 in our own country. This form of instruction, according to its original intention, is to be adapted to time and circumstances.

While the teaching of the Classics is adhered to, every attention is paid to the natural sciences. In addition to exercises and compositions in English and French, and daily lessons in Arithmetic and Mathematics, a double course of lectures on the Physical Sciences is given to the more advanced students twice a week during the winter term. Besides the two weekly lectures on Natural Philosophy, during the last winter there was a weekly lecture on French Literature, by M. Charles de Villiers.

There is in the College a Preparatory Department, the object of which is to qualify pupils for the higher studies.

No one is admitted even to the Preparatory who cannot read and write. There is, however, a class of Caligraphy for the younger students.

The College is intended for day scholars only, irrespective of creed or religious profession.

No attendance at our religious exercises is exacted or expected of non-Catholic students.

No one will be admitted without producing testimony of good moral character.

When a scholar presents himself for admission, he is examined by the prefect of studies, and placed in that class for which his prior attainments may have fitted him.

There are two examinations in the year, in February and in June. At any time during the year, and particularly at the first examination, if any one be found capable of passing to a higher class he will be promoted, and such promotion will be equivalent to the honors of the class left.

In case of absence from class for a day, or part of a day, or of late attendance, a note from the parents or guardians will be required, accounting for such absence.

Quarterly reports are sent to parents or guardians.

No deduction will be made from a quarter begun, except in case of sickness or expulsion. The quarter consists of eleven weeks.

The hours of class are from $8\frac{3}{4}$ a. m. until $11\frac{3}{4}$ m., and from 1 p. m. to $3\frac{1}{2}$ p. m. Prompt attendance will be required.

TERMS, (payable quarterly in advance:)
